

Sneak Peek: 2017 San Francisco Decorator Showcase

This year's show house, open April 29 through May 29, mixes classical flourishes and modern luxuries with ease

Bryan Anthony April 28, 2017

Houzz Editorial Staff; writer, design enthusiast, reader, softball player.

2017 San Francisco Decorator Showcase

When: Saturday, April 29, through Monday, May 29

Where: 2698 Pacific Ave., San Francisco

Info: Check the website for hours and ticket information.

The San Francisco Decorator Showcase is celebrating its 40th anniversary in grand fashion. The 11,000-square-foot Classical Revival house, built in 1904 by architects Newsom & Newsom, has been reimagined by some of the region's top interior designers. The decorated rooms are not intended to create a unified interior but instead to showcase each designer's style.

This year's home belongs to a blended family of 10, so creating rooms to comfortably and stylishly accommodate the large family was a priority for many of the designers. Visitors to the show house enter through an impressive rounded front portico with columns and an ornate balustraded roof.

Master Bathroom: Glamour Spa

Designer: Cecilie Starin Design

“Everyone wants a spa-like master bathroom,” says interior designer Cecilie Starin. “I wanted to make sure it was glamorous too.” The floating vanity’s waterfall countertop and square brass pulls (from Liz’s Antique Hardware) up the luxury factor. The gold-framed custom mirrors were designed by Starin; they can slide several inches in both directions to block the sun or change the view. The master bath’s walls are covered in Caesarstone intended to look like marble.